AWG President's Message

by Rick Hodgdon

Fellow Woodworkers,

My hearty thanks to Carl Wick on two issues! First, Carl beat EVERYONE else to take the position of editor for our newsletter, yea!

Second, Carl has suggested adding some additional member input for the newsletter. When someone has purchased new equipment or tool and would like to critique it, write a description, perhaps with a photo. Also, should someone complete a project which cannot be brought to the meeting for Show and Tell, perhaps too large or still in progress, please consider writing a description with a few photos. Have you made a new jig for your shop? Tell us about that too. Great stuff for the newsletter! (Example in this issue— Ed).

As some members have heard, Andy Borland has had a tough time in the past few weeks, first in the hospital and now in a recovery center, going through physical therapy. In the finest Fellowship tradition, Jim Menefee has created an “edgy” get well card for our membership to sign at the February meeting.

One last thought, I know this meeting lands on Valentine's Day, remember to cover all your “bases” before attending the meeting. You can kiss your partner any time, but you only get to shake hands with our Tribe once a month! See you there.

Featured Speaker

February's Speaker
Paul Jackman

Paul Jackman is a local full-time woodworker settled in SW Washington, DC. He practices his craft mostly in the form of "content creation" through YouTube and through various other social media channels. Although hard to contain, his niche appears to be high-end reclaimed and upcycled projects through woodworking. He makes fast-paced and entertaining build videos on his YouTube channel that are made for everyone, but with the ultimate goal to get the younger generations excited about making things. His educational background includes training in woodworking and carpentry at a vocational high school and a college degree in civil engineering. Very few people these days are lucky enough to have the hands-on learning experience that he had, so he's trying to pay it forward by translating what he knows into very easily digestible videos where people are entertained while they learn (whether they realize it or not) and often laugh at his own expense. To see more about what he does, check out his website www.jackmanworks.com, or just go right to his YouTube channel, www.youtube.com/jackmanworks. Even better, come to the February meeting to experience Paul first-hand.

Show and Tell

Each month we all benefit from the experiences of our members as they display and explain their latest woodworking creations. Here are January's show and tell participants:

Barry Frankel summarized the many different skills he learned as an AWG Education Fund prize winner. This prize is awarded twice a year; see the raffle page for details.

Rick Hodgdon displayed a band-saw box with veneer decoration that he constructed

Show and Tell

Chris McDonald displayed some turned bowls that he made

David Blois shared his artistic “twist” on a stepping stool

Show and Tell

Art Mensch displays a beautiful hand-crafted bow saw

Bill Schneck shows the box he made to hold all the tools he got for Christmas

Last, but certainly not least, Kem King, our photographer (ironically not pictured here), presented innovation in the form of a bagel cutter and a cookbook holder.

Well Done to all!

Tool Review

INCRA Miter 1000 Hd

Have you ever tried to make a picture frame only to find your cut angles were 44 degrees? The Incra 1000hd miter and sled combination solves that problem and can produce any other odd cut angle you might need for a special project. A separate miter gage has a heavy-duty quadrant with index teeth spaced every one degree. Another toothed plate engages the miter quadrant for a positive lock at any whole degree. A vernier feature micro-positions a cut to the nearest 0.1 degree. The slide portion of the miter has multiple adjustment points to fit securely and travel smoothly in virtually any table saw slot. A high quality aluminum fence comes with the miter. The fence has a secure work stop with both coarse and micro workpiece length adjustments. A portion of the fence can be extended for a total working length of about 28 inches. The companion sled is constructed of heavy duty laminated pressed board with heavy extruded aluminum runners. The miter is retained in the sled by secure cam-locks. There are additional channels in the runners for t-bolt clamps. One clamp comes with the sled. The sled can be set up for left or right tilting blades. When initially trimmed for the saw, the produced cutoff sled piece can be locked in another saw slot to support cut ends.

This is a very well-built tool that will give you precise results and will last a long time. Some may find it expensive, but simply set up a swear jar, then try to make a few picture frames without it and you will have the cash in no time!! See www.Incra.com
